PAINT YOUR OWN PICTURE WITH FIRSTSEARCH

FOR MANY LIBRARIES, PROVIDING REFERENCE DATABASES TO PATRONS has meant supporting a confusing hodgepodge of technologies, workstations, and services. Wouldn't it be nice if one system could simplify your efforts and meet most of your information needs?

The FirstSearch service is the most adaptable patron reference system available today. Like an artist selecting colors, you have a wide range of options with FirstSearch to create the perfect reference picture for your library.

- Flexibility to choose databases
- Pricing flexibility—per search or flat fee
- Common user interface—yours or ours
- Remote and/or in-house access
- OCLC Dedicated Line, Internet, Dial Access
- Document Ordering and ILL
- Expanded Full Text

With FirstSearch, you have lots of flexibility, which is vital in a time of exploding choice and unpredictable change. You can tailor FirstSearch to fit in with today's patron service strategies—and tomorrow's.

Now is the time to paint the FirstSearch picture that's best for you.

FURTHERING ACCESS TO THE WORLD'S INFORMATION

OLA QUARTERLY

This summer issue of the OLA Quarterly has been edited by Teresa Montgomery of Southern Oregon State College and Susan Barnes Whyte of Linfield College. Hence the academic orientation of many of the following articles, which cover various topics of high interest to academic librarians but which touch the working lives of all librarians in the state: the scholarly workstation, development of a library for the Coquille tribe, distance education, collection development, and the continual debate over instruction vs. reference. Also included are various reports from the most successful OLA annual conference this past April. Library land continues to be rich in the dynamics of change: changing technology, changing demands of our patrons, and changing work relationships. We trust that this particular issue finds you right in the middle of all this, but not losing the fervor in our historical mission to connect people with information.
